

SUNKEN MUNITION SHIP IS BELIEVED TO BE ATLANTIAN

A GULF PORT, June 28.—Naval officials here today were awaiting official confirmation of the report that the munitions ship recently torpedoed and sunk after leaving this port for Europe, was the British steamship Atlantian. Private sources here were confident that the Atlantian was the vessel which was sunk last night. The Atlantian left here on May 28 last, with munitions for a European port.

"MEN WILL TAKE WOMEN'S PLACES" —MRS. PANKHURST

Disabled soldiers will be encouraged to become domestic servants after the war to replace women who have left their homes to become industrial workers, according to Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, English suffragette, here today.

"Women have invaded every occupation save that of stoking furnaces," she said, describing the situation in England. "After the war they will not go back into the homes. Their places can be filled by disabled soldiers, barred from active work, who would be glad for light work in kitchens and gardens."

American women, Mrs. Pankhurst said, have a big task ahead which will take them into the field to plow and into the factories to do every kind of labor. She predicted increasing sacrifices would have to be carried by American women.

Will An American Girl Eventually Sit Upon the British Throne

It is formally announced in London that the young Prince of Wales will shortly proceed on a great tour of the British Empire, and THE UNITED STATES. The problem of finding a wife for the young prince is likely to be settled during this tour, and there are several persons of high rank in British society and politics who do not conceal the fact that they are hopeful of bringing about a match with one of our greatest heiresses. It is believed that the King himself looks with favor on the plan. Such a marriage would be in harmony with the spirit of the times, the progress of democracy, and a closer union of the Anglo-Saxon race. Pictures of the Prince of Wales and the young lady in question illustrate this big feature story.

"THE BOOK OF THE 47,000"

English Men and Women With Disgraceful Charges Against Them.

Compiled By German Spies.

—is dealt with exhaustively in this week's account of the true adventures of Mme. Storch, vampire, and German spy. These two pages of the Sunday Magazine Section are illustrated with the famous portrait of Mrs. George Keppel, social favorite of King Edward's reign, Maude Allan, the fantastic American dancer at the most dramatic moment in her performance of Oscar Wilde's "Salome," and a daring bathing costume pose of Kathleen Clifford, the American stage star.

Many of the occurrences referred to in this story of "The Book of the 47,000" were responsible for the libel suit brought by Maude Allan against a London weekly newspaper published by Noel Templeton Billing, an extremely aggressive member of the British Parliament. The personal grievance of Miss Allan, who brought about the suit which she lost, is of small public interest compared to the charges of German spy activities that were made. Those who follow the war beyond the battle lines will find much to interest and enlighten them in the part Mme. Storch played in wholesaling and retailing British scandal for German benefit.

ELINOR GLYN'S NEW NOVEL

"As he lay on the grass at her feet his mind was full of thoughts, and plans and desires to drag this angel down from her high heaven—into his arms!" Artist Frederick portrays this episode very charmingly in this week's installment of this story by the author of "Three Weeks"—enough to last fiction followers until the arrival of the following week's installment.

"Keeping Up the Firm" is the title of this week's complete short story, "Surprising New Discoveries About Mosquitoes," Mrs. Joel W. Thorne's story of her experiences in a mad house, and the Page of Health, Beauty, and the Home, round out a most pleasing magazine section.
